Introduction

Takamatsu Busshozan-cho is a town that has prospered over its history as the gate-town to Honenji. At Honenji you can see a reclining Buddha and a 5-tiered pagoda that was just finished in 2011. near Kotoden Busshozan station is the Onari-Kaido, a road that served as the pilgrimage path to Honenji for the local rulers during the Edo period. (Onari means the arrival or departure of a person of high rank.) Every year this history is celebrated at the Fall Festival, where people dress as the daimyo local rulers and make a procession up this road. In the town there are shops that have passed down through the generations. There are also shops that are old houses or renovated buildings, now used as cafes or pastry shops. Japanese history and modern design are skillfully blended here.
