A way station close to Tsudano Matsubara's white sand and green pine landscape

Facility Introduction

This way station is located in Tsuda-no-Matsubara, chosen as one of Japan's Top 100 beaches, with its beautiful landscape of white sand and green pines. There are udon restaurants and shopping areas as well.

Tsuda-no-Matsubara is known for the beauty of the contrast between the white sand and the black pine forests. The forest was planted in the Edo period as wind protection for the Iwashimizu Hachimangu shrine. It has since been designated as the Kinrin Park, a Prefectural Park, and Setonai Sea National Park. You will be impressed by the old pines, some of which have an age of more than 600 years.

In the summer, this place bustles with the more than 130,000 people that come annual to swim. This ocean swimming area is the largest in the province. Both of the bridges in Tsuda-no-Matsubara have different names for the coming and going lanes. One of them is called Miai-bashi (Arranged Marriage Bridge)/Deai-bashi (Encounter Bridge), and has a bright red railing. The other bridge is called Negai-ganae-bashi (Wish Granted Bridge), and it is said that wishes will be granted. Together with the 'Enmusubi Matsu' (Pine of Destiny), two trees joined at the roots, this spot holds many benefits for people eager to make a wish for their love life.
